

A NOVELTY IN GENTLEMEN'S NECK-WEAR.

Something New, Nice and Nobby.

The Combined NECK-TIE AND SHIRT-BOSOM meets a want which has long been felt, but never supplied until now. In offering this very useful invention to the public, we believe the many advantages of its use will be readily seen and appreciated. It is admitted by all persons of good judgement and taste, that no gentleman's toilet is complete without a nice linen bosom; but the custom of wearing the bosom in the shirt has been attended with so much inconvenience and expense, that various devices have been used as a substitute, but with no satisfactory results, as nothing else can fill the place of a linen bosom.

To arrange a bosom separate from the shirt, that will be convenient and satisfactory in every way, has been the object of the inventor. In this combination the bosom can be readily removed and replaced by another when a change is required, and both bosom and tie are as easily adjusted to or removed from the neck as the common neck-tie.

To men who travel or are away from home, students, etc., the Combined Necktie and Shirt-bosom will prove invaluable.

Shirts with bosoms are inconvenient to pack, and when worn at night soon become soiled and broken.

Those who wear colored shirts can enjoy the luxury of a linen bosom, without being obliged to change the shirt. Mechanics and others, who have some pride in looking respectable in going to and from their work, can slip them off during working hours. The expense of a large linen bosom in the shirt is saved.

Ladies will be pleased with them, not only for their neat and tidy appearance, but because the hard and perplexing work of laundering shirt-bosoms is entirely done away with. They only need to be seen to be appreciated.

Patented June 14, 1887, by David S. Bragdon, West Durham, Me., assignor of one quarter interest to Z. K. Harmon, Portland, Me.

United States Patent, No. 364,894; Dominion of Canada Patent, No. 27,204, dated at Ottawa, July 19, 1887.

DAVID S. BRAGDON,
Z. K. HARMON.

A NOVELTY IN GENTLEMEN'S NECK-WEAR. Something New, Nice and Nobby.

The Combined NECK-TIE AND SHIRT-BOSOM meets a want which has long been felt, but never supplied until now. In offering this very useful invention to the public, we believe the many advantages of its use will be readily seen and appreciated. It is admitted by all persons of good judgement and taste, that no gentleman's toilet is complete without a nice linen bosom; but the custom of wearing the bosom in the shirt has been attended with so much inconvenience and expense, that various devices have been used as a substitute, but with no satisfactory results, as nothing else can fill the place of a linen bosom.

To arrange a bosom separate from the shirt, that will be convenient and satisfactory in every way, has been the object of the inventor. In this combination the bosom can be readily removed and replaced by another when a change is required, and both bosom and tie are as easily adjusted to or removed from the neck as the common neck-tie.

To men who travel or are away from home, students, etc., the Combined Necktie and Shirt-bosom will prove invaluable.

Shirts with bosoms are inconvenient to pack, and when worn at night soon become soiled and broken.

Those who wear colored shirts can enjoy the luxury of a linen bosom, without being obliged to change the shirt. Mechanics and others, who have some pride in looking respectable in going to and from their work, can slip them off during working hours. The expense of a large linen bosom in the shirt is saved.

Ladies will be pleased with them, not only for their neat and tidy appearance, but because the hard and perplexing work of laundering shirt-bosoms is entirely done away with. They only need to be seen to be appreciated.

Patented June 14, 1887, by David S. Bragdon, West Durham, Me., assignor of one quarter interest to Z. K. Harmon, Portland, Me.

United States Patent, No. 364,894; Dominion of Canada Patent, No. 27,204, dated at Ottawa, July 19, 1887.

DAVID S. BRAGDON,
Z. K. HARMON

Contributed to Maine Memory Network by Maine Historical Society
(A86-190-29)

Date: 1887

Description: Novelty in Gentlemen's Neck Wear advertisement