

Folly Island Feb 13 64
My dear Nellie,
I was obliged to send my last letter to you before I could see yours of the 29th. It came however a few hours afterwards just as we had received orders to embark on a secret expedition.
Since that time, as my letter to Mother will inform you I have actually been in a fight. It seems very strange after all the monotony of our life down here but it is true. I with my usual good fortune escaped without a scratch as did also Bramhall. I refer you to my letter to Mother for a full account of the little affair. We got back yesterday and I am again in my very comfortable quarters.
Your letter of the 4th just came. You are really a delightful correspondent and deserve the highest praise. I only hope my poor letters give you as much pleasure as I derive from yours. Please tell Miss Rice that I like her little picture very much; I havent decided whether to put in a ring where I can see it always or in a locket and wear it near my heart.

I received by this mail also a letter from Mr Allen who tells me you are all well from which I presume he has called.

I suspect you were not so communicative to Harry about Mrs Ray's party as you were to me. I am afraid he would improvise a quarrel with the "real fine looking and agreeable" Captain "on some generals staff. I am very glad that Harry has made his arrangements to visit New York he was so very anxious to go

If you see Gertrude Pond give my kindest regards to her, and to Nellie Reed also, and tell Hattie Furbish that I should have written by this mail but this expedition of ours alluded to above took up so much time that I am only able to write my home letters.

I don't expect we shall have much to do now for some time the negro troops on this island have been sent to join Genl Seymours expedition to Florida and all the troops that are left will probably be needed for the defense and daily routine of this island. I am a deal more contented with such a state of affairs than I was. I have had one fight here and although in the Army of the Potomac it would not deserve mention, yet here it is considered "quite an affair" After this I am willing to live in my comfortable quarters a little while at least. I have now been in nine actions and can rest satisfied for a month at least.

I am afraid that you wont be much interested or pleased with this letter but you must consider my letter to Mother as being virtually addressed to the whole family and take your share accordingly.
And so my dear girl - good bye.
Write to me as often as you can your letters find me a glad and eager reader
